THE BULBOUS IRISES

No finer cut flower is offered to the trade, today, than the bulbous irises—Tingitana Hybrids, Dutch, Spanish and English. In America these flowers are yet to come into their own and the growers first to raise them in their sections are sure to reap a golden harvest. Such has been the experience of the Pacific Coast growers who have discovered the possibilities of these modern flowers. Picked in bud and shipped across the continent, these isises have proven themselves phenomenal shippers. Their lasting quality is equalled only by the gladiolus. Unlike the gladiolus, they bloom at a time of year when flowers are most in demand at high prices. Under glass, the Tingitana hybrids have been brought into bloom in December and January, and the newest varieties of Dutch iris have been but slightly tardy in similar performance. In the Puget Sound region, outside blooms are from April on.

Those who are familiar with only the Spanish iris will marvel at the size and substance of the Dutch. Each season, new and finer varieties are being introduced that show earlier blooming, increased size, better form and more wonderful coloring.

The Spanish and English irises respectively prolong the outside period of bloom from May to July.

First and second size bulbs produce marketable flowers. Planting stock gives blooming bulbs in one season's growth.
